From the Pastor

Significance of Christian Fasting

In the early Church, there were two fasts. The first was the “total fast” that preceded all major feasts or sacramental events. The ancient name for this fast was statio, which means to stand watch, on guard or in vigil. The second fast was a fast of abstinence from certain foods; e.g., meats or fats. This was more an act of self-discipline and self-control. The statio fast was total and a means of watching and waiting for something. The statio or total fast is always preparatory.

The total fast is still kept today an hour prior to reception of Holy Communion. Following Holy Communion, the total fast ceases because what we’re keeping vigil for has arrived, and the wait is over.

On the other hand, the fast of abstinence was allowed on Sundays because the continuity of abstinence can be important for it to be effective.

How did fasting become such an important means of preparing for the Eucharist and of learning virtue through self-discipline?

Christian fasting is revealed in an interdependence between two events in the Bible: the “breaking of the fast” by Adam and Eve, and the “keeping of the fast” by Christ at the beginning of his ministry. Humanity’s “fall” away from God and into sin began with eating. God had proclaimed a fast from the fruit of only one tree—the tree of knowledge of good and evil (Genesis 2:17), and Adam and Eve broke it. Humanity, in Adam and Eve, rejected a life dependent on God alone for one that was dependent rather on “bread alone.”

The tragedy is not so much that Adam ate food, but that he ate the food for its own sake, “apart” from God and to be independent of Him, believing that food had life in itself and thus he could be “like God.” He put his faith in food. This kind of existence seems to be built on the principle that man does indeed live “by bread alone.”

Christ, however, is the new Adam. At the beginning of His ministry in the Gospel of Matthew, we read, “When He had fasted 40 days and 40 nights, He became hungry.”

Hunger is that state in which we realize our dependence on something else. The ultimate question is, “What does my life depend on?”

Satan tempted both Adam and Christ, saying: “Eat, for your hunger is proof that you depend entirely on food—that your life is in food.” Adam believed and ate.

Christ said, “Man does not live by bread alone” (Matthew 4:4; Luke 4:4). This liberates us from total dependence on food or on things of this world. Thus, for the Christian, fasting is the only means by which man recovers his true spiritual nature.

In order for fasting to be effective, then, the spirit must be part of it. Christian fasting is not concerned with losing weight. It is a matter of prayer and the spirit.

Therefore, true fasting may well lead to temptation, and weakness, and doubt, as it did for Jesus. But our spirit will be made stronger, and we shall come out victorious in our struggle against evil.
