Catholic Education—Part 3

Why is Catholic Education important? Our schools evangelize. Our schools celebrate the Word of God day in and day out. If a child goes to a Catholic School, K–G-8, and he/she goes to the weekly School Mass, he/she will have heard the Word of God at Mass over three hundred times. That does not include the classroom Religion Class, Advent and Lent specials, and hundreds of other times. No one who goes to our schools could possibly graduate and not have a sense of the Word of God. Our schools have been, are, and will remain the best, the very best way to evangelize.

I do not think that society is all bad and that everything is wrong with society. But I can say this: Thirty years ago when I was a boy, had I not gone to Catholic School, I still might have been somewhat formed as a good and honest person by the culture around me. I don't think that this is true for children today. They are being shaped and formed by a culture that does not have God at its core—at its center. In fact, they are being shaped and formed by a culture that is anti-God. We are living in a confused society, a society that does not know the difference between male and female, a gender-fluid society, where children as young as 13 can start puberty blockers and hormonal therapy to begin transitioning into a gender of their choice without parental consent.

If you are an immigrant from Mexico, Latin America or Asia, the culture you came from was mostly Catholic and it evangelized. When you immigrate here you often realize too late that the town or city that you are living in now is not Catholic or evangelizing your children the way it did in your village in Mexico or Central or Latin America. Rather, this anti-God culture is shaping and forming your children. That is why Catholic schools are important—to evangelize and form your children with God at the center of their lives.

Our schools teach children to pray. Teach a child to pray, and you will do him/her a favor for the rest of his/her life. When you learn to pray as a child, it goes into a groove in your brain that stays with you for life. It gets stuck in there. I have visited a lot of people who are ill and who are dying. Some of them often times are not able to respond or talk. But the moment you make the Sign of the Cross, you see their hands moving as well.

Or, you say the “Our Father” prayer or the “Hail Mary,” and you see their lips moving. They make the Sign of the Cross every time I bless them.

Our schools are the only educational system that tracks the poor, so that they will not “fall through the cracks.” The poor are known by name. They are cherished. They are helped. Research has shown that Catholic School graduates vote more, are less racist, contribute more to the Church, and are more active in their communities. They participate in civic and community life. I encourage you to attend one of the School Masses on a weekend, and see and hear the amazing things St. Francis students do at Mass. The children of our School animate one Mass a month.

A Catholic School has the unique capacity to academically connect reason and faith; science and religion. This is an especially important feature for our young people today. Indeed, the Center for Applied Research (CARA) at Georgetown University suggests the same.

St. Mary's Press recently published a CARA research study it commissioned in a publication entitled Going, Going, Gone: The Dynamics of Disaffiliation in Young Catholics. Its findings noted that the average median age when formerly Catholic teens and young adults left the faith was 13. Just under half (45%) said their disagreement with the Church's stance on a political issue important to them was at least “somewhat” important to their decision to leave. This is not surprising given the cultural wars, social issues and divisive political polarization in our wider society. But what was very surprising was that 36% said that the perception that their Catholicism conflicts with their scientific learning was at least “somewhat” important to their decision to leave the Church.

A Catholic Education is the answer to this. When confronted with science competitive with his/her Catholic faith, many young people simply leave their faith instead of delving deeper into it. Our young people don't know that their Catholic faith and science go together—they complement each other. Or as St. John Paul II so eloquently noted in his encyclical Fides et Ratio, “Faith and reason are like two wings on which the human spirit rises to the contemplation of truth. . . .”
